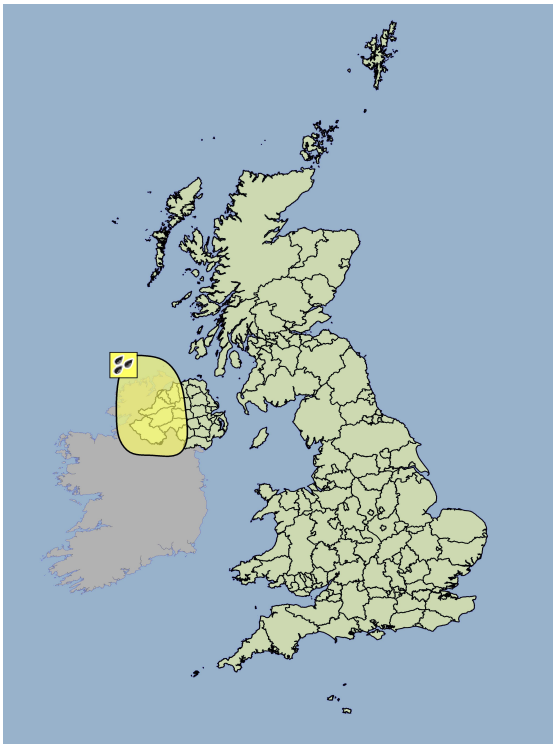
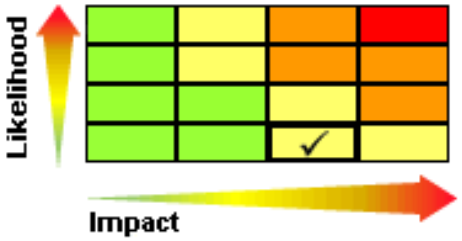
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A deeply unstable airmass covers much of Northern Ireland. This has resulted in very heavy showers, some of which are becoming aligned into slow-moving north-south bands which could give locally 10-15 mm in an hour and up to 30 mm in 2 or 3 hours. As is usual in such situations some areas will miss the worst of the rain. The showers will slowly ease this evening

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 16:40 on Mon, 09th Jun 2014 until 21:00 on Mon, 09th Jun 2014

Frequent heavy showers and thunderstorms will continue to affect the western half of Northern Ireland into this evening, perhaps accompanied by hail.

The public should be aware of the risk of localised flooding.
